CASE STUDY a study of patients identified as having a specified health problem. (Woncadic)

Case report; An approach that uses in-depth investigation of one or more examples of a current social phenomenon, utilizing a variety of sources of data. A 'case' can be an individual person, an event, or a social activity, group, organization or institution. A major feature of the case study, according to Hakim (2000), is its flexibility. It can range from a simple narrative description to a very rigorous study achieving experimental isolation by the selection of cases on the basis of the presence or absence of key factors rather than the use of random assignment. A case study can involve a single case (for example, a community study or a 'sociobiography' of a member of a deviant subculture) or a number (possibly quite large) of cases (for example, in the analysis of the conflict behaviour of different types of work groups).(Sage dictionary)

Case Reports [Publication Type] Clinical presentations that may be followed by evaluative studies that eventually lead to a diagnosis.(MeSH)

CASE STUDY DESIGN a research method, which deals with development of knowledge from one or more particular cases, chosen to demonstrate or confront a more universal phenomenon relevant for a broader context. (Woncadic)
